Title: Frontline Connect Initiative

The COVID-19 pandemic has profoundly impacted frontline healthcare workers with many experiencing crisis level rates of anxiety, depression, suicidality, trauma, and substance use.

Unfortunately, these healthcare workers are not accessing the mental health care they need when they need it.

The urgency in improving access to mental health care could not be greater.

The American Psychiatric Association Foundation is proud of the work our Center for Workplace Mental Health is doing on the Frontline Connect initiative- helping address the barriers clinicians face and partnering with the experts working on these issues.

As a leader in your hospital or health system, our digital toolkit will allow you to learn from peer institutions that have made mental health services more accessible for their healthcare workforce. Join us, increase access, make an impact.
